22	Stow Town Owned and Conservation Land	1:22:14	12/4/2008		Forum with the Land Use Taskforce Please join the Land Use Task Force for a review of its work to date in reviewing land available for town use. The Board of Selectman established the Land Use Task Force to "conduct a thorough analysis of land in Stow and report back to Town Meeting." The Task Force's work includes an analysis of current and future land needs, and an analysis of land in town that is: town-owned, or under a conservation restriction. This forum will give participants a more thorough understanding of the likely and realistic options as the Town considers its source of land to meet various needs in the future. In addition to reviewing the parcels of land already owned by the Town, the Task Force will review the process through which the town could potentially convert land under conservation restrictions for any other use.

The uplifting strength of the Grand Canyon and, in particular, the Hopi Indian culture that has evolved and endured in direct relationship to this powerful region are the lenses that focus her work. The immense, dramatic skies and the strength of the people who have survived in the environment combine to create striking images of life in one of its extremes. Hall's paintings allow her to remember and honor their strength, explore and perpetuate its presence in her life today. Her paintings embody the drama, power and sheer majesty of the region.'

					Wednesday, November 19, 2008 Strickland Wheelock and Kathy Clayton-Seymour talking on Saw-whet Owl Banding in Massachusetts - What we Know and What we Don't Strickland Wheelock and Kathy Clayton-Seymour will give a brief history of saw-whet owl banding in Massachusetts, followed by an overview of saw-whet banding methodology, and an analysis of what they have learned collaborating with other Massachusetts saw-whet owl banding stations and Project OwlNet. The program will end with a discussion of the myriad of questions their research has raised. Strickland Wheelock has been an active birder, field trip leader for the Massachusetts Audubon Society, and Master Bander since 1972. For the past 5 years, Kathy Clayton-Seymour and Strickland have been running dual Saw-whet banding sites at Drumlin Farm and Lookout Rock in Northbridge. When not birding, Strickland manufactures woolen textile products. Kathy Clayton-Seymour is a member of the Sanctuary Committee at MassAudubon's Drumlin Farm. Kathy chairs the Birder's Advisory Committee and serves as Bird-a-thon Fundraising Coordinator. In that role, she has helped raise over one hundred twenty thousand dollars towards avian education and conservation efforts at the sanctuary. She leads adult and family birding programs for Drumlin Farm, and is very active with their youth birding clubs. An experienced bander, she helped set up the Lookout Rock owl banding station in Northbridge, and manages banding operations at Drumlin Farm. She was honored by MassAudubon as one of 7 people who made a difference in 2007.

Are there wolves in New England and if not, will there ever be? Can wolves and people live together harmoniously? Have you ever heard the howl of a wolf in the wild? Cynthia Menard, an educator with the MetroWest YMCA will present a slide show and discussion about the history, ecology and future of this amazing animal. Come join us to hear wolves howling, touch real wolf fur, and find out first-hand how large a wolf's canine tooth really is! This talk is suitable for adults and families with children ages 10 and up. Cynthia Menard has her Masters degree in Conservation Biology from Antioch New England Graduate School. She spent two years tracking and mapping predators in northern Massachusetts for her Master's Thesis, and co-led a trip of her graduate peers to Yellowstone National Park to study wolf ecology with park biologists. She currently teaches animal tracking throughout Massachusetts, and works as a Naturalist and Assistant Camp Director for the MetroWest YMCA in Hopkinton, MA.

					the Landscape: Using Nature's Clues to Design a Garden That Works Natural ecosystems can provide us with a lot of information on native plants and how they grow. Looking into the symbiotic relationship these ecosystems make use of will lead us in the choices we make when designing sustainable landscapes. Natural ecosystems will also provide us with the framework we need to attract Birds, Bee's, Butterfly's and other exciting critters. Choosing native plants that provide food and forage for wildlife is a great way to keep a diversity of life happy and abundant in your landscape. Invasive plants can disrupt this delicate balance of life and removing them is the great help you can provide. We at the New England Wild Flower Society have many great native alternatives you can make use of. Scott Lafleur is Director of Horticulture at the New England Wild Flower Society. A graduate of the University of New Hampshire horticulture program, Scott specialized in perennials and perennial garden design. Upon graduating in 1996 Scott started a professional gardening Service in Rye,NH. The hallmark of Scott's business was meticulous work using the best horticultural practices. Scott expanded his business into a landscape design and installation company. He sold the business in 2001 after 10 years of operation and undertook a three year project designing a 135 acre VT farm into rolling green hills, extensive gardens and a network of trails to access the property for horse back riding and hiking. During his designing and research for the project Scott became very interested in native plants and ecological landscaping. These pieces of the design were key to its success. Scott completed the project in 2006 and was hired by the New England Wild Flower Society as the Senior Horticulturist for their botanic garden, Garden in the Woods. Scott was promoted to Director of Horticulture in 2008, his current position. Garden in the Woods is a 45 acre Botanic garden dedicate to the

81	FARNWR Eastern MA Geology	1:00:50	1/30/2008	Sudbury	Wednesday, January 30, 2008 Chris Hepburn of Boston College (aided by Tracey Arvin) talking on Assembling the Jigsaw Puzzle of Eastern Massachusetts Geology The rocks we find in eastern New England arrived here in the closing of an ancient, pre-modern Atlantic, ocean basin through plate tectonics. Eastern Massachusetts is made up of the last-to-arrive fragments from the other side of this ocean as well as volcanic island chains that formed within the closing ocean. These pieces crashed into the edge of North America over tens of millions of years, growing our continent. Major faults, no longer active, form the boundaries of these bits of geologic wreckage and also record the ways in which they were assembled. The rocks of the Assabet River National Wildlife refuge lie close to one of these major fault zones and formed as part of an ancient volcanic island arc that existed some 500 million years ago. J. Christopher Hepburn is a Professor in the Dept. of Geology and Geophysics at Boston College where he has taught geology for over thirty years. He received his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in geology from Harvard University. His research has largely been devoted to deciphering the geology of the northern Appalachians through its petrology, geochemistry, structural geology and tectonics. Tracey Arvin is a graduate student in geology at Boston College in the process of completing her M.S. degree. Part of her thesis work includes the geologic mapping of the area containing the Assabet River NWR. Ms. Arvin currently teaches at Blue Hill Regional Technical School.

82	FARNWR Shadegrown Coffee Agriculture People and Birds	1:08:40	3/21/2007	Sudbury	Wednesday, March 21, 2007 Paul Baicich talking on Shade-grown Coffee Future: Birds, Agriculture, and People Surely, you've heard about the links between birds and shade-grown coffee. In this talk, we will take a journey to visit vital points of intersection, a crossroads for birds, agriculture, and people. Join Paul Baicich as he leads us through an exploration of the shade-coffee/birds connection, focusing on Latin America and the Caribbean. You will leave the presentation with the ability to explain the issue to birding and non-birding friends alike! Paul Baicich has been an active birder since his early teens. He went on to work for the American Birding Association, where he organized their conferences and conventions, edited publications, and then served as ABA's Director of Conservation and Public Policy until late 2003. His concerns include an abiding interest in bird conservation (especially shade-grown coffee) and studies in the breeding biology of North American birds. Paul also has co-led a number of birding tours to Alaska. He is on the Management Board of the Prairie Pothole Joint Venture and on the Waterbird Conservation Council. Paul has worked as an independent consultant and writer for the National Wildlife Refuge Association for the past two years and has spent the past few years promoting support for our unique and valuable National Wildlife Refuge System. He has made two special visits to Nicaragua over the last few years, specifically to visit shade-coffee co-ops. An article on birds and coffee by Paul recently appeared in Bird Watchers' Digest. It is provided at www.birdwatchersdigest.com thanks to the generosity of BWD.

83	FARNWR Green Chemistry	1:02:30	6/20/2007	Sudbury	Green Chemistry: Necessary Steps to a Sustainable Future Imagine a world where all segments of society demanded environmentally benign products! Imagine if all consumers, all retailers and all manufacturers insisted on buying and selling only non-toxic materials! The unfortunate reality is that, even if this situation were to occur, our knowledge of materials science and chemistry would allow us to provide only a small fraction of the products and materials that our economy is based upon. The way we learn and teach chemistry and materials science is for the most part void of any information regarding mechanisms of toxicity and environmental harm. Green Chemistry is a philosophy that seeks to reduce or eliminate the use of hazardous materials at the design stage of a materials process. It has been demonstrated that materials and products CAN be designed with negligible impact on human health and the environment while still being economically competitive and successful in the marketplace. This presentation will describe the history and background of Green Chemistry and discuss the opportunities for the next generation of materials designers to create a safer future. Amy Cannon is the director of community outreach and education at the Center for Green Chemistry and an assistant professor in the department of Work Environment at the University of Massachusetts Lowell. Amy graduated as the first PhD in Green Chemistry from the University of Massachusetts Boston where her research involved the environmentally benign synthesis of photoactive materials. Amy received her undergraduate degree in chemistry from Saint Anselm College in Manchester, NH and worked for the Gillette Company as an analytical chemist for 5 years before returning to graduate school. She was awarded the Kenneth G. Hancock Memorial Award in Green Chemistry in 2004 for her work on titanium dioxide semiconductors and their application in dye-

84	FARNWR Protecting Arctic Shorebirds	0:57:05	5/23/2007	Sudbury	Wings: Birds of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge Stephen Brown, Director of Shorebird Research & Conservation at Manomet Center for Conservation Sciences, will discuss his book, Arctic Wings: Birds of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, and his research expeditions to Alaska's North Slope. Arctic birds highlight the interconnectedness of the hemisphere as they complete epic migrations between the ends of the earth, and illustrate the importance of halting global climate change before their habitats are destroyed. Dr. Brown's presentation features stunning photographs of elusive arctic birds on their breeding grounds, and includes insights into new discoveries about their habitats and the conservation challenges facing them. As Manomet's Director of Shorebird Research and Conservation, Stephen Brown works on a wide variety of science and policy issues related to protecting this imperiled group of birds that literally cover the globe during their annual migrations. Stephen was the lead author of the U.S. Shorebird Conservation Plan which brought together wildlife managers and policy makers from all 50 states and several federal agencies, university researchers, and many other conservation groups to develop a coordinated strategy for restoring the declining populations of shorebirds. Stephen has an active research program in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, where his work helps to determine the impacts that oil development would have on nesting shorebirds, and he has recently completed a study of American Oystercatchers that included a census of the entire Atlantic and Gulf coasts (see www.shorebirdworld.org). Stephen has been a conservation biologist with Manomet Center for Conservation Sciences since 1998. He earned his undergraduate degree from Hampshire College in Environmental Studies, and his Master of Science degree from the University of Michigan School of Natural Resources studying an endangered shorebird. 					Establishing a Population of Blanding's Turtles at Assabet River NWR: Using Reintroduction as a Conservation Tool for Turtles Come learn about the proposed reintroduction of Blanding's Turtles to Assabet River National Wildlife Refuge. Dr. Kurt Buhlmann will discuss turtle reintroductions, including his recent work on the proposed reintroduction of Blanding's Turtles to Assabet River NWR. Dr. Kurt Buhlmann is a conservation ecologist focusing on amphibians and reptiles, including turtles. He has been fascinated with turtles since he was a boy. His research interests include habitat management needs of herps with emphasis on issues such as the amount of terrestrial habitat needed around seasonal wetlands, the effects of prescribed fire, and control of invasive species. He has worked with a number of organizations including The Nature Conservancy, U.S. Forest Service, and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Kurt spent several years working with Conservation International on conservation strategies for turtles globally, particularly in Asia. He is co-author of the Partners in Amphibian and Reptile Conservations (PARC) Habitat Management Guidelines for Amphibians and Reptiles of the Northeast (as well as a companion volume for the Southeast). He has recently become involved with turtle projects on several National Wildlife Refuges, including Great Swamp, Walkkill River, and Assabet River in the Northeast. He and his wife, Tracey Tuberville have implemented some reintroduction strategies for gopher tortoises at several sites in the Southeast, and more recently begun designing similar research with freshwater turtles. Kurt currently wears several hats, and is a research scientist at the Savannah River Ecology Laboratory in South Carolina and also works independently as a consulting conservation biologist. Originally from New Jersey, he holds a B.S. in Environmental Studies from Stockton State College, a M.S. in Wildlife Sciences

87	FARNWR Monarch Butterflies	0:51:50	4/25/2007	Sudbury	Wednesday, April 25, 2007 Madeline Champagne talking on Monarch Butterflies Monarch butterflies are perhaps our most intriguing butterflies, arriving in New England early in the summer and then migrating thousands of miles away to spend the winter. However, only a few of Massachusetts' 125 or so species are migrants, and most people don't stop to think about how they get through our winters. Madeline Champagne, former President of the Massachusetts Butterfly Club, will discuss survival techniques (from getting through the winter and from evading predators) for Monarchs and other species of butterflies, as well as for moths. Madeline has been fascinated by butterflies since in the early 1990's when she raised some Monarch butterflies from eggs that she found in the wild. Her butterfly-related activities have included planning and maintaining butterfly gardens, giving talks, working in the classroom and in the field with teachers and students, and monitoring specific butterfly populations at various sites. She has worked with land trusts, garden clubs and other organizations. In the past few years, she has focused on educating people about butterflies.

89	FARNWR Black Bears in MA	1:49:11	10/24/2007	Sudbury	Wednesday, October 24, 2007 Bear Expert Jim Cardoza talking on Black Bears of Massachusetts Perhaps you've seen and heard about occasional sightings of black bears and human confrontations with them. How common are black bears in our area? What draws them to our towns and how can we learn to live at a respectful distance with these large furry neighbors? This slideshow presentation by Mr. Cardoza will cover the history, biology, and management of the black bear in Massachusetts. He will help us understand the bear's history, changes in status and distribution, biology and life history, habitat changes, research programs, human-bear interactions, and management issues. Mr. Cardoza, a certified wildlife biologist, has been the leader for the Massachusetts Fish and Wildlife wild turkey (since 1969) and black bear (since 1970) project. He holds a B.S. and M.S. in wildlife biology from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. His years of study and field experience with black bears has made him the state's leading expert on the subject. He has received numerous awards for his work in conserving and managing our state's bear population.

Cathedral Music Sunday, November 18, 2006, 8:00 PM Immaculate Conception Church, Marlborough with The Sterling Brass Consort The vaults and spacious arches of the European Gothic style venues for these concerts will reverberate with beautiful music designed and composed for just such large spaces. The program will feature shorter works for a cappella chorus and for chorus with brass including works by Gabrieli, Schütz, Mendelssohn, Bruckner, Górecki, and Biebl. Gabrieli's seldom heard Magnificat for three choirs as well as Schütz's Psalm 100 for double chorus will be especially glorious in these settings.

Dyer I live in Acton, MA and I am Financial Planner with Integrated Financial Partners, Inc. I am a member (past board member and officer) of the Middlesex West Chamber of Commerce. I am also very involved in the local community I am on the board and past president of the Acton Lions Club and I coach my kids sports teams when I can and I am the Cub Master of Pack 32 in Acton. I mention all of this is because I am doing this program as part of my commitment to community service. My office number is 978-264-1906 and my cell phone is 978-697-5510 and my email is tjdyer@aol.com, my office email is tj.dyer@lfg.com. It is the intention that we will do a series of shows one each month on various topics on issues that people in the community face. The first was how the Real Estate bubble has effected the local area. We will be featuring local business experts on a particular subject. The intent is to be informative on a particular subject with out selling a product or service. We want the topics to be timely, informative and local. We want to take national issues and break it down to how it affects you and me Joe and Jane homeowner in Stow or Acton. We will not be doing a political show or government program. I think it is important that we let people know who the guest are and why I have them on, what is there expertise? I do have an intro based on credentials of each guest and in the closing I say 'if your interested in the topics discussed the guest their contact information will be in the credits'. When I thank them for coming on the program I will give their name, business name and how they can be reached. '

This ninety-minute presentation features close-up images of plants in a range of magnifications as well as photographic portraits taken from a more customary perspective. The audience will become familiar with the distinguishing characteristics of the most common plant families and learn how to apply this information to identify herbaceous plants in the field. The survival value of these plants' specializations in accomplishing such essential functions as pollination, seed dispersal, and photosynthesis is also explored. Everyone is invited to share their knowledge about habitat preferences, life cycles, and cultivation of our native wildflowers. Illustrated pamphlets with descriptions of plant families, informative websites, and a bibliography for further study will be distributed at the conclusion of the program. John Root is a naturalist and educator based in the Pioneer Valley. For additional information about John and his work, visit his website. http://www.johnroot.net/

					Wednesday, February 27, 2008 Marion Larson of MassWildlife talking on Connecting Children with Nature: Wildlife Education Opportunities from MassWildlife If you like wildlife and have an interest in sharing your passion with young people, MassWildlife offers some educational opportunities for families, students and youth groups and for people who work with youth. Classroom teachers, homeschoolers, youth group leaders and other people who work with kids can find out how to incorporate wildlife and the environment into their programs through MassWildlife. Families who want to learn outdoor skills can also explore MassWildlife's opportunities as well. Marion Larson, Information and Education Biologist with MassWildlife will not only talk about education programs, but will also conduct an activity or two for you to experience! Marion Larson has worked with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts since 1985. She has a degree from the University of Vermont in Environmental Interpretation and began her career as an Environmental Police Officer (game warden) patrolling northern Middlesex and Worcester Counties. (Law enforcement is just another form of education!) She transferred to the Mass. Division of Fisheries and Wildlife in 1991 as a Wildlife Education Specialist where she worked with teachers and other educators on wildlife programs and a watershed education program that included high schools in the SuAsCo watershed. Currently she serves as an Outreach Coordinator working with tourism groups, writing newsletter articles, providing agency web page content and answering questions on a variety of wildlife topics. She volunteers as a Hunter Education Instructor for MassWildlife, serves on her town's Open Space Committee and enjoys hiking, birding and running. You can find out more about MassWildlife at: www.mass.gov/masswildlife.

239	Concord Conservatory Fiddle Fest 3-09	0:53:37	3/8/2009	Outside	Submitted by Greg Porter, greg.a.porter@gmail.com. The Concord Conservatory of Music hosts a concert of fiddle and banjo music as part of the CCM Faculty Performance Series. The duo of Cathy Goode and Louis Kaplan will transport the audience to a variety of traditional folk music cultures. They play Irish traditional music such as polkas from Country Kerry and jogs from County Clare. Fine examples of driving Bluegrass instrumental music in the tradition of the late Bill Monroe. Also music from Scotland and Cape Breton. Both performers have taught and played in the Boston area for many years. They teach in children's music programs at the Grey Fox and Joe Val Bluegrass festivals. Ms Goode is a Suzuki violin teacher at CCM. Goode and Kaplan have won ribbons at local fiddle and banjo contests. This inspiring and toe tapping program is sure to make you want to get up and dance.

242	FPC Coffeehouse Vance Gilbert 3-09	1:27:00	3/27/2009	Combo	Mike Jordan and Lew did the recording, and Lew edited the show. This show has all the commentary edited out except for an interview with Vance shown at intermission time. Two DVDs of the raw footage without editing, with much commentary, are stored with the edited DVD but do not need to be encoded. New Revival Coffeehouse First Parish Church of Stow and Acton presents Vance Gilbert Friday, March 27, 2009 Gilbert has earned an unusually deep affection and loyalty from his fans. He is that rare performer for whom people lean forward in their seats as eagerly between songs as they do during them. These 'Vance-heads' see him over and over again, always expecting to be surprised, never being disappointed.' - The Boston Globe The voice of an angel, the wit of a devil and the guitar of a god. - Ft. Worth Star-Telegram His lyrics are highly personal, his tenor vocals fluid and enthralling..... musical risks punctuated by passionate vocal delivery, brilliantly intuitive guitar playing, and immeasurable courage.....gives you a feeling of utter joy - Dirty Linen Vance Gilbert strikes just like lightning... Gilbert's voice has been called 'undeniably expressive,' 'remarkable' and 'stunning' by contemporary critics, and rightly so. Gilbert's songs have the piercing quality of a dart shot right through the heart. - New Texas Magazine To learn more about Vance Gilbert and his music, go to http://www.vancegilbert.com/

Hogan, who is the co-chairman of the Elder Caucus in the legislature, is organizing this event in order to increase communication between policymakers and seniors in her district. The keynote speakers will be state Rep. Khan, D-Newton, and Al Norman, executive director of Mass. Home Care. Representative Khan will speak to the current policy debate around whether to limit driving privileges for older drivers. She is the sponsor of a bill, supported by Representative Hogan, that would limit driving privileges based on cognitive impairment, regardless of age, thereby eliminating any age discrimination. Norman will speak about home care issues in Massachusetts. His organization advocates for increased support for home care as a safer, more cost effective and more independent alternative to nursing homes. Hogan is a strong proponent of home care as a way to strengthen communities by keeping seniors active and independent. Both keynote speakers will be taking questions from the audience.

Performed by Assabet Valley Mastersingers Dr. Robert P. Eaton, Artistic Director Master Singers of Worcester Malcolm Halliday, Artistic Director Worcester Polytechnic Institute Orchestra Dr. Douglas Weeks, Director Alden Voices of WPI John Delorey, Director Symphony of Psalms - Stravinsky Kvalite Boga! (Praise God!) op. 65 - Gretchaninoff "Bogoroditse" - Rachmaninoff "Kalinka" - Prokhorov "Sacred Love" - Sviridov "Cherubic Hymn" - Glinka "Kvalite" from All Night Vigil- Chesnokov This is a unique opportunity to hear some of the best Russian Choral literature presented by the combined forces of the Assabet Valley Mastersingers and Master Singers of Worcester supported by instrumentalists from WPI and freelance professionals. Symphony of Psalms is familiar to many but the Gretchaninoff cantata Kvalite Boga! is a newly discovered and rarely heard choral gem. Some of the very best Russian a cappella choral literature accompany these two masterworks. Symphony of Psalms Igor Stravinsky's Symphony of Psalms is considered one of the monumental works of the twentieth century and one of his most mature compositions. According to musicologist, Joseph Machlis: "For sheer grandeur of conception there is little in the output in the first half of the [twentieth] century to rival the closing pages of the Symphony of Psalms." The Symphony of Psalms was commissioned for the Boston Symphony's fiftieth anniversary in 1930 and dedicated to the BSO. http://www.avmsingers.org/MKT_IMG/english_march2009.pdf

462	FARNWR Beasts of Burden NE Wild Animals 5-09	0:53:38	5/27/2009	Sudbury	Author and conservationist Ron McAdow will show photographs of New England's vertebrate fauna: birds, mammals, reptiles, and amphibians. He will describe how motion-triggered cameras capture images of secretive mammals such as fox, fisher, bobcat, and river otter. Photos will be accompanied by brief readings from essays by Thoreau, Emerson, and others that help us understand how these animals enrich our culture, our imaginations, and our lives. Ron moved to Massachusetts, from his native state of Illinois, in 1971. He is author of a guide to the nature and history of the Concord, Sudbury, and Assabet Rivers, and a similar work about the Charles River. Ron has worked as a volunteer and staff member of the regional land trust Sudbury Valley Trustees for the pass two decades, and has served as Executive Director since 2002. Ron's column, "Knowing Our Place" has appeared in 40 Massachusetts newspapers. Ron has documented his explorations of Massachusetts' outdoors with his camera as well as his pen, and takes pleasure in sharing his pictures, and those of his friends, with audiences interested in the natural world.

463	FARNWR MA Wildlife Journey thru Time 4-09	1:20:29	4/29/2009	Sudbury	For the seemingly limitless forest tracts of colonial time, to the largely cleared agricultural landscape of the nineteenth century, and back to the predominantly forested state of today, the Massachusetts landscape has gone through major historical transformations. In this presentation John O'Keefe, forest ecologist and Coordinator of the Fisher Museum at Harvard Forest, will discuss the legacy of these transformations, emphasizing how a sequence of human and natural disturbance has shaped the character of our modern landscape with special emphasis on wildlife responses. John O'Keefe was born and grew up in Boston, Massachusetts and received a BA in sociology from Harvard College. After serving as a Peace Corps volunteer in Lesotho and as a pilot with the Massachusetts National Guard, he returned to school and received his graduate degrees (MA AND PhD) in forest ecology from the University of Massachusetts/Amherst. Since 1988, John has been Coordinator of the Fisher Museum at the Harvard Forest Dioramas, where he interprets forest history and current research to visitors. With Forest Director David Foster, he is co-author of 'New England Dioramas'. John, his wife, Lynne, and daughters Sara and Erin live in North Orange, Massachusetts, close to the New Hampshire and Vermont borders in a 200 year old home built by the first sawmill owner in the area.

464	FARNWR Peter Alden Ups and Downs of our Birds 6-09	1:28:25	6/24/2009	Sudbury	This will be a lively overview of how and why our local birds have responded to huge changes in our landscapes over the years. Topics discussed (with fine photographs) will include the flood of prairie birds east in the 1800's, the role of cowbirds, the pros and cons of bird feeding, the role of medium-sized carnivores on our game birds in an anti-trapping era, the role of birds in spreading invasive alien plants, invasive birds, and whether climate change or other factors is allowing all these 'Dixie' birds to dominate New England. Peter Alden of Concord, is a past president of both the Brookline Bird Club and the Nuttall Ornithological Club, and a founder and current co-compiler of the Concord area Christmas Bird Count, the nation's largest. He has pioneered and led bird and nature tours to 100 countries. Peter is the author of 15 books with sales of 1.5 million so far (many available at the talk). In 1998 he created the world's first Biodiversity Day with E.O.Wilson, where 100+ invited experts found 1,905 fungi, flora and fauna in one day. The Walden Woods Project is sponsoring him to run the Walden Biodiversity Day II on July 4, 2009 to celebrate Ed's 80th.

481	Kattelle Art Exhibit 6-07	0:13:01	6/13/2007		series organized by the Arts Alliance in collaboration with the Town of Hudson. The opportunity to exhibit is offered to Arts Alliance members with a new show every three months. This exhibit continues through mid-September. The paintings in the current exhibit were done by a woman who lived more than a hundred years, including 52 years on Lake Boon. Laurie Hyson Kattelle was born at Mahone Bay, Nova Scotia in 1886 and came to the United States in her late teens, eventually studying at the Vesper George School of Art, now closed. She was employed as a fashion illustrator in the advertising department of the newly opened Filene's Boston store. In 1918, Laurie met and married Ensign Laurence Kattelle. After the couple's only child, Alan, was born in 1919, Laurie continued with her artwork, doing portraits of friends and illustrating children's books. When the Lindbergh baby was reported abducted in 1932, it was Laurie's sketch, which was published in The Boston Globe. After Laurence Kattelle retired in 1955, he and Laurie moved to their Lake Boon summer place, which, at that time, was located in the town of Stow. Laurie became an active Stow artist, had an exhibit in 1982, and painted the scenes for the Stow Centennial poster. Her son Alan studied at Columbia University, School of Engineering. His first real job was at Hudson's LaPointe Machine Tool Company. While residing in Darien, Connecticut, Alan delighted in utilizing finds from nearby scrap metal yard to construct sculpture. Alan has received the following awards: the 1967 Darien Art Show - First Prize, Hudson Public Library Purchase Prize in 1968, and First Prize in the 2002 Arts Alliance Member Juried Arts Exhibit. Since retirement, he has had two books published - 'Home Movies - a History of the American Industry 1897-1979,' and 'Images of Lake Boon, Hudson and Stow, Massachusetts.' The goals of the Arts Alliance are to inspire an interest in all aspects of the arts, to foster an

556	Lurking in the Trees Asian Longhorned Beetle 7-10	0:26:46	7/6/2010	Outside	Requested by Stow Resident Ken Descoteaux. It started when a sinister-looking bug fell in someone's lap in a backyard on a summer afternoon. That chance discovery lead to a terrible realization: insect-invaders from Asia were killing trees in New England, and the only way to stop the pests was to cut down and grind up over 25,000 trees. Worcester, MA could be any town in America -- not too big, not too small -- but it learned that, in today's world of nearly infinite international trade, an invasive pest can sneak in, become established, and wreak havoc, unless citizens are informed and vigilant. 564	Rep. Kate Hogan Local Farms Local Food Roundtable 6-10	1:17:58	6/14/2010	Combo	Produced by Stow TV (Lew Halprin) & Hud-TV from Kate Hogan's website: Small Business Tour: Local Farms/ Local Food On June 14th I met with members of the Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Business at the Nashoba Valley Winery in Bolton, part of a series of statewide listening tours intended to help legislators understand more about agricultural issues. This event was specifically related to local family farms. I hosted this roundtable discussion in hopes that it would spur conversation between colleagues and local farmers regarding the importance of local farms and their many contributions to our district. Watch for excerpts from testimony on our local cable stations in July. Attendees included farmers from Bolton, Stow and neighboring towns, advocates from the Massachusetts Farm Bureau, and authorities from the UMass Extensions Service as well as the two chairs of the committee, Rep. Linda Dorcena Forry (D-Boston) and Senator Michael Moore (D-Millbury). I believe we can create a more robust farming economy for our towns and I will continue to be a strong voice for our local agricultural community on Beacon Hill.

596	FARNWR The Asian Long-Horned Beetle in MA 2-09	1:05:59	2/25/2009	Outside	Produced by Doug Seale for Sudbury TV An established population of The Asian Long-Horned beetle (ALB), recently found in Massachusetts, resulted in the designation of a 33 square mile regulated area for the pest, (the northern section of Worcester and parts of four other towns). The pest arrives from China in wood packing material and pallets and then seeks out and destroys healthy hardwood trees, especially maples. The Worcester find is the closest that this beetle has ever been to invading a forested area in North America. This talk will highlight the realities and ramifications that this serious invader has brought to our doorstep and its potential affects on Green Industry businesses, neighborhoods, the forest, and town budgets. Bob Childs, an Instructor since 1984, teaches entomology courses at UMass with the bulk of his students being enrolled in the Stockbridge School of Agriculture. He also has a 60% Extension appointment to the Landscape, Nursery and Urban Forestry program, providing accurate and timely diagnostics of insect pests, making recommendations, writing about current trends in pest identification and management, and acting as an overall resource for the Green Industry. He also performs numerous workshops that are related to Integrated Pest Management. He was one of the faculty involved with the development and funding of the Urban Forestry Diagnostic Lab at UMass, Amherst, and was responsible for the development of the New England Recommendation Guide for Insects, Diseases, and Weeds of Shade Trees and Woody Ornamentals. He has produced two reference books for the industry through funding from the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management.

More information about the technique at www.mbarnett.com . Produced by Marika Barnett. From Marika: When I combine four identical photos suddenly a fifth image comes forward. The original object disappears and emerges a design that sometimes reinforces, sometimes contradicts the original object. One can then see unexpected, surprising details and emerging new images that surface only through the creation of the mirror images. It has never been done on video. 619	SVT Eastern Coyotes Ecology Behavior Jonathan Way 10-10	1:59:18	10/21/2010	Daisy	Ecology and Behavior of Eastern Coyotes/Coywolves, speaker Author Jonathan Way, Eastern Coyote Research. SVT welcomes back Jonathan Way. His book, Suburban Howls, will be available for purchase. Very little is known about these animals in suburban and urban settings, but Jonathan Way's research has provided insight into these fascinating, highly successful predators. Way is part of a team that has recently investigated the eastern coyote's genetics and has found them to be coyote and red or eastern wolf hybrids, and proposes to call them coywolves due to its mixed species origin. His talk will focus on his team's genetic findings as well as ecological and behavioral findings from his decade long study. 'Michael Sanders' <msanders@svtweb.org> 978-443-5588 X11

Facinating look at a unique private school that existed in Sudbury from 1928-1947 financed by the world's first billionaire. The Wayside Inn was once a high school for boys? Henry Ford, who owned the Inn from 1923 to 1945, developed an educational concept for under-privileged boys after launching a similar program years earlier in Dearborn, Michigan. In March of 1928, thirty wards of the state of Massachusetts became the first students at Henry Ford's new Wayside Inn Trade School. Pupils at the school did their own housework, and were paid enough wages to buy clothing and pay a modest boarding fee. When Henry Ford died and the Ford family subsequently disengaged from Wayside Inn ownership, the Wayside Inn Boys School held its final graduation exercises in June of 1947.

Together since 1988, Susie and David have built a steady following for their own blend of contemporary, traditional, and original folk and acoustic music. Burke's vocal style is at once stunning and heartfelt, and is matched by Surette's fluid fretwork. ----- Susie's musical tastes and influences are varied and many, encompassing contemporary and traditional folk, swing, country, topical songs, and acapella singing, with detours along the way for Broadway showtunes and classic ballads. 'She possesses one of the finest, purest ballad sopranos heard in folk music today' writes Scott Alarik in the Boston Globe, noting that 'her phrasing is unerringly devoted to the lyric' and that 'Burke displays a gift for pulling honest emotional chords - all too rare in these clever and cynical times.' ----- David Surette has been performing in the area since the mid-80s, both with Susie and with a number of other groups and musicians. As a multi-instrumentalist, David brings a variety of stringed sounds to the duo; Folk Roots magazine notes that his 'bouzouki, guitar, and mandolin playing is exemplary.'

An outstanding cast of soloists, performed in the stunning concert hall at St. Mark's school make this an event not to be missed. This romantic work is considered one of the greatest of Mendelssohn's works. The work features the dramatic story of the prophet Elijah from the Old Testament of the Bible, told in harmonies both alluring and lurid. Mendelssohn uses these Biblical episodes, doubtless well fitted to the taste of Mendelssohn's time, with a Victorian sentimentality detectable in places. http://www.avmsingers.org/2009-2010season/2009-10details.html

Ferdinand, King of Navarre, opens the play by declaring that his court will be devoted to study for three years—and, to keep the distractions to a minimum, no women will be allowed within a mile of the court. Berowne, Longaville, and Dumaine agree (although Berowne expresses reservations about the venture and its chances for success). Berowne also points out that the king has forgotten that the Princess of France is coming that very day. As they set out to meet the princess, the king's fool, Costard, is sent to Don Armado to receive punishment for breaking the king's commands with the country girl, Jacquenetta. Needless to say, the Princess and her entourage are offended when they are denied entrance, so in protest they make camp right in front of the court. Boyet makes note of the king's 'affection' toward the Princess, and the ladies
